

Moderated by WILPF's Secretary-General Madeleine Rees, peace advocates will share their stories of alternative paths to peace. Together we will go behind the usual thinking about peace and bring to the surface different analysis, stories, strategies and solutions.

Madeleine Rees | WILPF Secretary-General, Switzerland/US

Driven by a feminist commitment to justice and the need to end, once and for all, the system of patriarchy, Madeleine Rees is a rebel with a cause. By making the connections between people and perspectives, she outlines alternatives to the systems and attitudes we have inherited.

Joy Onyesoh | Peace Activist and WILPF International President, Nigeria

Joy Onyesoh is a passionate feminist peacebuilder. Believing in the power of each human being, she has inspired, motivated and encouraged women – and men – to work for peace for over a decade. Her work on leading the Women's Situation Room during the Nigerian elections is remarkable.

Anthony Keedi | Masculinities Technical Advisor of Abaad, Lebanon

The Beirut-based psychologist Anthony Keedi underwent his own transformative change from the Patriarchal to the Pro-Feminist. Feeling oppressed by society's definition of masculinity, he decided to change the way we define "masculine behavior" and to raise awareness of gender-based violence.

Christine Ahn | Peace Activist, Founder and Executive Director of Women Cross DMZ, Korea/US

Just back from the De-Militarized Zone (DMZ) between North and South Korea with feminist icon Gloria Steinem, Christine Ahn continues to mobilise women to end war. She brings to light the impact of war on women's lives, and demands women's participation in the peace process.
